

E·BID MANAGER

streamlining your activities

A lot of the time that buyers have available is taken up by repetitive activities. Within purchasing projects a lot of time is lost by having to request quotes from existing and new suppliers. For different types of products like construction requests, the purchase of parts or the hire of temporary staff, quotation requests are continuously issued to suppliers. The use of e-mail and MS Excel signified a welcome improvement compared to the telephone and fax. After all, the process is much the same.

Reducing work pressure

At the core of the work pressure in repetitive quotation requests is the quantity. Issuing the requests is actually the least of the problem. An MS Excel sheet is easily prepared and the e-mail addresses of the suppliers are already known. The 'hassle' starts once the request for quotation has been issued. Especially when a number of requests are outstanding at the same time, the oversight lessens quickly.

For instance, you want a better overview of the responses so that you can see at a glance which quotes have been received. You want an integral overview of offered prices without having to cut and paste in MS Excel. And in the case of changes in your price sheet, different versions must not overlap. In short, some additional streamlining is definitely desirable. What you really want is a system that makes it just as easy to issue quotation requests as the system you are currently used to, but that increases the transparency of the process and ensures content is always easy to find.

Digital quotation requests: a next step

Professionals deserve smarter tools. Commerce-hub is the first to introduce a solution that makes your quotation requests manageable and understandable. The distinguishing feature of C-SOURCE E-BID Manager is the ease with which quotation requests can be generated, received and issued.

This makes E-BID Manager extremely low-threshold to use and takes a lot of work out of your hands. For instance, you can easily re-use existing quotation requests or import them from MS Excel. You then recreate them in your own corporate style on the basis of e-mail addresses.

E-BID Manager is very suitable for exchanging large databases. Your suppliers will also respond enthusiastically: clear requests, easy to understand calculation sheets with the option to enter comments and attach appendices. The recipient can instantly forward the quotation request by e-mail to the right person within his organisation, which means you will get a reply quickly. It is also extremely easy to handover projects in the case of your absence.

After all, all the data has been stored in a central location and is digitally available everywhere. All the requests are sent from your own work environment. You will maintain insight into the status of current requests at all times. You get even more benefits from the reply overview: all the price information conveniently lined up. At a glance you can see where the differences are. If you want to analyse further, you can export the replies to MS Excel with a single action.
